Made possible by the generosity of individual and corporate donors, the AMA Foundation’s programs bring together physicians, industry and other health care professionals, academicians and community leaders to help solve our country’s most significant health care challenges.

The Community Health Program, through the best models of care, is increasing health equity and improving health outcomes among vulnerable populations, particularly those suffering from chronic diseases.

The Medical Education and Leadership Program is addressing diversity in the practicing physician population and cultivating future physician leaders who will work to improve our nation’s health.

The LGBTQ Fellowship Program is one of the first medical fellowships of its kind—specifically designed to train physicians to address and treat the health care needs of the LGBTQ community.

The AMA Foundation Corporate Roundtable convenes companies and other entities that share a commitment to improving public health in the U.S. Each roundtable meeting is tailored to timely and pertinent topics of interest to its members and provides a forum for focused dialogue on current issues related to the health of the public and the betterment of patient care.

During the AMA House of Delegates meetings and the AMA National Advocacy Conference, roundtable members are provided opportunities to interact with medical leadership and gain important insights on critical issues in health care.

Through the roundtable you can stay informed about the latest AMA updates and developments while also supporting programs that effect enduring positive change in communities throughout the country.
